

100 Activities Already Pre-Registered for Culture Days 2011!

Over the past two weeks, activity organizers from coast to coast to coast have shown their tremendous support for the Culture Days movement by being some of the first to register their activities during the Culture Days 2011 pre-registration period (which continues until April 22nd).

Since pre-registration opened on March 15, to date, one hundred activities have been registered!

Thanks to those who've registered! For those who haven't yet, there are still another 3 weeks left to pre-register your activity.

By pre-registering a Culture Days activity, you'll enjoy the following benefits:

- Your activity details will be listed on the Culture Days website and may be included in newsletters, social media and other communications;
- You'll be included in press materials for the Culture Days national media launch this spring;
- And, the first 5 people* to register their activity starting April 7th, 2011 (as of midnight ET), will also receive a Retro CBC Mobile Reporting Bag in celebration of our National Broadcast Partner's 75th anniversary!

So what are you waiting for? Pre-register your activity now! It's free and easy and don't worry; if you don't have all your activity details locked down just yet, simply write in "TBD"; you can log in and update your information at a later date when you have confirmed those details.

Not sure how to pre-register? Check out this helpful blog post that will walk you through the simple registration process step by step.

If you have any further questions, feel free to contact your regional representative – they'll be able help.
