Dear Colleagues,

The Culture Days movement continues to grow! ...People are signing up as Fans of Culture Days on Facebook, following us on Twitter, and, like you, they've registered for email updates. A few weeks ago, the project was reported very favourably in 3 major newspapers: The Globe and Mail, The National Post and Le Devoir. (Links to those articles follow below.) The attention generated by those articles has been very exciting, and has helped propel the project forward with some very interesting contacts and collaborators.

Today's exciting news: the arts and cultural community on Prince Edward Island has officially committed to being a part of Culture Days 2010!

Conversations with other provinces and potential collaborators are continuing. Updates and announcements will be issued via this e-list, so please forward this email to your colleagues and encourage them to subscribe to the Culture Days mailing list.

Other quick updates: A bilingual name and logo is being finalized; we look forward to sharing it with you when we soon launch the Culture Days website. Also, a guide to registering your involvement with Culture Days 2010 is on its way.

In the meantime, your stories are needed! Culture Days is looking for great stories about community engagement activities that you've heard about, you admire, or you've undertaken yourself. Send us the scoop - with a photo or video, if possible - to helenyung@culturedays.ca and then watch for your story or suggestion to be featured on the Culture Days website, Facebook fan page, or perhaps in follow up stories by the media!

Thank you for your continued enthusiasm and support.

Until next time,

David and Helen
