Register early for special feature opportunities

Thanks to the many artists, groups and municipalities that have registered an activity (or two) online. If you or your colleagues and networks have not done so yet, we encourage everyone to register as soon as possible. CBC, one of our major media partners, is planning TV and radio broadcast promotions of Culture Days activities, so we need to know about the activities you are organizing. To get noticed, register an activity, or contribute a story to our blog about how you or your community will celebrate Culture Days this fall.

Activity registration only takes 5 minutes. To help organizers understand their responsibilities, we've published this Checklist for Activity Organizers.

There is no registration deadline. But register and publish early to take advantage of all the marketing and promotional opportunities around Culture Days. You can always come back to update your listings with additional details whenever necessary. REGISTER NOW ▶

Thank you to all the activity organizers who have registered early on the Culture Days system. See WHO'S REGISTERED ▶

Tele Info Sessions: Dial in to ask your questions

The first public telephone information session for activity organizers went very well. The next 2 sessions will be on Monday, May 17 at 1pm ET, and Tuesday, May 25 at 2pm ET. Dial in to ask questions and learn more about how to get involved. There is no cost; we will email you a toll free number. RSVP for these or other future sessions online. RSVP ▶

Have an urgent question that cannot wait? Our website lists the contact information for each province and the national office. CONTACT US ▶

More updates

Live publishing starts very soon. Image upload now available. Some of you have noticed that when you press that "Publish" button, your activity details are not posted to our website right away. Don't worry, live publishing will start very soon. (You'll receive an email about it.) In the meantime, image upload and keyword tagging functions are now available. When you log in to edit your activities, you will be able to upload an image from your computer, and add keywords to help the public search for your activity. LOGIN NOW ▶
